

David Hunter

I am a multidisciplinary designer and programmer, creating interactive experiences for spaces and screens, and using data-driven computational design processes. I enjoy working on projects from concept initiation, research, through to final outcome creation, for clients, commissions, and in collaboration with others.

I am Course Leader in UX/UI Design BA(Hons) and a Senior Lecturer on Ravensbourne's Graphic Design BA(Hons) at Ravensbourne University London. Prior to joining the permanent staff in 2014, I taught at Ravensbourne across different courses for four years. I am a funded researcher, leading on the Data Walking project which explores the data gathering and visualisation process through workshops with a variety of participants, places and technologies, to explore their local environment on walks.

Prior to teaching I worked for six years as a freelance digital designer and developer at a variety of agencies across London, and managing my own clients.

I studied Graphic Art & Design at Leeds Metropolitan University, gaining my Masters there in 2006. My work traversed investigating non-linear interactive video, application development, and print outcomes experimenting with format and organisation.
