

RMIT Classification: Trusted

Tanja Rosenqvist is a transdisciplinary researcher who uses participatory design and co-design to empower marginalised and vulnerable communities in the Asia-Pacific region. Her work explores the complex relationship between people, technologies, and governance structures, and deals with topics such as water and sanitation service provision, disability inclusion, and maker cultures. Tanja works as a Lecturer in Humanitarian Engineering at RMIT University in Melbourne, Australia.